Spring is the season for new beginnings. Excitement is in the air. Warming breezes, newness of life and softness of rain blend to bring beauty to our wonderful state.

The Health Care Licensing Bureau (HCLB) embarked on its new beginning through our recent reorganization. As a visionary, Lisa Addington, Bureau Chief, gave her staff the opportunity to expand their horizons and share the vision of enhanced customer service, increased accessibility to the public and standardization of internal policies and procedures. Ms. Addington invited the camaraderie of her staff to join in the opportunity to develop professionally and individually by expanding their horizons. The staff participated in FOCUS (finding opportunities and creating universal solutions) meetings to evaluate the purpose, mission and core values of the HCLB. Creativity was unleashed as ideas were heard for continuous improvement and customer service. The beginning of our vision for re-alignment began with the development of the Compliance Unit, Unit 1 and Unit 2. The Board Members were apprised of our new structure by Bureau Chief Addington, Becky Salminen, Jeannie Worsech, and Jill Caldwell, supervisors.

Pressing onward to meet our goals we request that you periodically fill out surveys that will be mailed to you. Your participation will provide insight into our strengths and weaknesses. Your comments will give us opportunities for continual improvement of the services we provide each of our 19 Boards and one Program. Your opinions are valued as a part of the team serving the residents of Montana, ensuring their health, safety and welfare.

FINDING OPPORTUNITIES AND CREATING UNIVERSAL SOLUTIONS

Who, what, where, when, why and how do we find opportunities and create solutions? FOCUS is a development process designed for change caused by re-organization and re-alignment in a business setting. The HCLB desired the reputation of prompt service, easy access and continuous improvement.

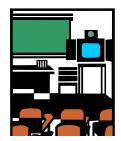

How was this goal going to be accomplished? Jim Brown, Business Standards Division Administrator and Lisa Addington, Bureau Chief, presented their questions to the HCLB staff. How do we function, how do we work together, what is happening within the BSD, HCLB and how do we improve our work product?

The HCLB began assessing where to find the common ground in working toward the Department's vision. The process began by having the opportunity for the staff to become involved in intense dialogue. Everyone was given the opportunity to be heard. Ideas, suggestions and comments were gathered and prioritized. Staff evaluated what does or does not work. Strengths and weaknesses were weighed. What was lacking? How can we improve? The principles of human interaction, combining service attitudes with external, internal and interdepartmental relationships were put into action.

Wendy Samson, PHR, Development Coach, facilitated discussions for the change and transition of our reorganization. Time frames and implementation goals were charted for reference points of our job performance. The art of adjusting is a group performance as the HCLB strives to achieve excellence in the service provided to the citizens of Montana.
